Report Overview

This is your personal onpage optimization report created for the webpage <http://webpromoters.us>. It will tell you in detail how well your page is optimized for your keywords today and will guide you in changing your webpage, so that you can reach top rankings in Google.

Optimization Rate

26.2%

Note: Optimization Rate shows how well your page meets optimization requirements for your specific niche, in percents.

Of course a 100% optimization rate is an ideal, but it is not a must. Today your optimization rate does not look very good. Do what this report recommends, and you will be able to reach better results in Google for your keywords.

Keywords

This report provides you with a strategy for improving your page to hit the top Google position for the following keywords. You can check how well your page is optimized for each of them now:

Keywords			Up
Keyword		Optimization Rate
1	online marketing services	36.3%
2	link building service	23.2%
3	online storefront	27.5%
4	ecommerce web design	18.1%
5	flash web design	25.8%
Average		26.2%

Note: All over the report, color markers range from red to green. If the color is red, you will have to make crucial changes on your page. The closer it is to green, the better your page is optimized.

Page Elements

To have a high-ranking page, you need to optimize each of its HTML elements. These are elements of your page's source code, and they are also called page elements. Any HTML element is part of your page's structure and contains some of the page's content.

Onpage Optimization Report teaches you how to compose your webpage elements so that Google gives you higher rankings. The main point here is using keywords the best possible way in any important page element.

See what these critical elements are and how far your optimization goes in each of them:

Keywords Overview

Before you start with optimization, there are some details about today's state of your <http://webpromoters.us>.

As you already know, to get a high ranking you need to figure out a winning way to use your keywords in each and every element of your page.

In other words, you must control some important factors for each separate keyword and in each page element. Here are these factors:

- The total number of words used in a page element: you should know how much text it is better to use. In this report, the total number of words will be called "Words Total".
- How many times a keyword is repeated within a page element, in percents of the total number of words in the HTML element. In this report, and in any other SEO materials, this percentage is called "Keyword Density".
- How close your keyword stands to the beginning of a page element, in percents of the total number of words in the element. In SEO in general, and in this report in particular, this percentage is referred to as "Keyword Prominence".
- How many times a keyword is used in a page element: always try to use as many keywords as possible, but never overstuff page elements with it. Here the number of uses of a keyword will be called "Keyword Count".

The report will also tell you your Score - the importance of a keyword for your webpage, from the point of view of search engines. To search engines, words with the highest score appear to reflect the topic of your page. Therefore, you must have a higher score for your main keywords.

Summary

Take a look at the factors that influence optimization of your page <http://webpromoters.us> and see how they compare to the average values among your top-ranking competition, for each of your keywords.

Note: The prominence of a keyword in the cloudmap depends on keyword score*.

Note: The prominence of a keyword in the cloudmap reflects how important it seems to search engines. So you can see if search engines pay attention to the right keywords on your page.

When Google decides how important your keywords are for your page, this largely depends on keyword density in different page elements. Look at the density for the 20 most frequently-used keywords on your webpage:

Keywords In Page Title

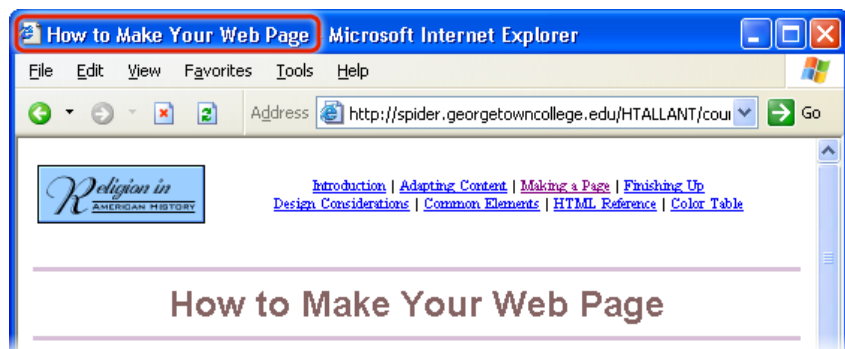

In the source code of your web page, page title is the text placed in the <title>...</title> tags. Search engines pay certain attention to titles, and show them in their results pages. Also, when a webpage is opened, its title stands in the blue bar at the top of your browser window.

For example, here is a tag: <title>How to Make Your Web Page</title>. And this is what you would see in Google's search results page:

How to Make Your Web Page

Keywords In Meta Description

Meta description is the text within the <meta>...</meta> tags in your page's HTML code.

For example: `<meta name="description" content="some description text"/>`

Search engines look at a page's meta description to find out what your page is about. You also see meta descriptions quite often - if you make a search in Google and look at the results, you will see some text under each link in the results page. Most often, these texts are pages' meta descriptions.

Meta description may not be extremely important for optimization, but still you have to make sure it looks attractive to search engines and to people. You will now analyze meta description of your page <http://webpromoters.us> and optimize it for Google.

Meta Keywords

Meta keywords are made for search engines only - so that they easily grasp your page's most important topics. There is a special meta keywords tag, which is supposed to briefly list the topics of your webpage. And it is wise to put your most valuable keywords into it.

Here is an example: `<meta name="keywords" content="some keyword 1, some keyword 2, some keyword 3"/>`

A meta keywords tag is not obligatory, and some sites do not make it at all. Still it takes so little time to make that if you are serious about optimizing your page, there is simply no reason why you shouldn't have a good meta keywords tag.

Keywords In H1 Heading Texts

In HTML code, headings are marked with h1 to h6 tags. These tags simply define the size of your headings, as they appear to the user. Among these six levels of headings, h1 is the biggest one and h6 the smallest.

This is an example of an h1 tag: `<h1>Pay Attention To This Line</h1>`

As we want our headlines, titles and other important things to look prominent, we normally put them into h-tags. And just like people think that the most prominent text on the page is more important than the rest, search engines pay more attention to what is written within h-tags. It is important to them how you use your keywords in headings.

The biggest heading, h1, is most important to search engines. So to get a better ranking, use your major keywords correctly in h1 tags.

Some pages do not use h1 headings at all, because they are not obligatory. However, search engines really think that text within the h1 tags is important. So do not miss the opportunity to add some points to your optimization.

As soon as you have your H1 heading texts well-optimized, it's time to switch and start making your bold text blocks more search engine friendly.

*Notes:

Words Total: how many words are used in the H1 heading texts.

Keyword Count: how many times the keyword is used in the H1 heading texts.

Keyword Density: the number of times a keyword is repeated within the H1 heading texts, in percents of the total number of words in the H1 heading texts.

Using Keyword: how many of the H1 heading texts use the keyword.

Optimization Rate: how well keyword use in the H1 heading texts meets optimization requirements, in percents of an ideal standard.

Keywords In Bold Text Blocks

If you are using bold font on your web page, you definitely want to pay user's attention to some words or phrases and show that some ideas are more important than the rest. In HTML code, bold text is marked with `ï¿½` or `ï¿½` tags.

Search engines look at what stands in these tags and, just like real people, believe that this information is important. And if these tags contain your keywords, search engines are more likely to rank your webpage higher. Therefore, try to express your important ideas using your keywords, and emphasize these keywords with bold font.

Keywords In Anchor Texts

An anchor text is simply the text that you see as a link and click on. For example, here is a hyperlink that points to www.some-site.com, with the "This link leads to SomeSite.Com" anchor: This link leads to SomeSite.Com

To produce this link, you would use the following HTML code:
 This link leads to SomeSite.Com

In this section, you will optimize anchor texts of links that stand on <http://webpromoters.us>.

Summary And Advice

Look at these features of your and your competitors' anchor texts - they all have their meaning for your page's optimization.

Of course, a good anchor text is more effective for a page to which a link points. Nevertheless, if you use your keyword in the anchor of a link pointing to another page from your own domain, you not only boost this other page's ranking. You also place a keyword on your page in a place where it is very prominent, and this is another step to improving your position in Google.

As soon as you have your anchor texts well-optimized, it's time to switch and start making your image alt texts more search engine friendly.

*Notes:

Words Total: how many words are used in the anchor texts.

Keyword Count: how many times the keyword is used in the anchor texts.

Keyword Density: the number of times a keyword is repeated within the anchor texts, in percents of the total number of words in the anchor texts.

Using Keyword: how many of the anchor texts use the keyword.

Optimization Rate: how well keyword use in the anchor texts meets optimization requirements, in percents of an ideal standard.

Keywords In Image Alt texts

The image alt text is used to display text when an image cannot be seen, for example in the case someone visits your page with a browser that has image loading turned off to let pages load faster.

If a web browser does not display images, this is what you would see instead:

In the HTML code of a webpage, image alt text stands in the alt attribute within the tag.

For example: ``

Obviously, using alt text makes sense for humans: many users prefer to work with images disabled. What is more important for you now, alt image attributes also have value for search engine optimization. Search engines cannot read figures or letters that are drawn on images. They only read normal text. Your keywords may look fantastic and eye-catching on an image - but the only guarantee that Google will see them is the alt text.

Therefore making alt text attributes and including your keywords into them is another efficient SEO technique.

Summary And Advice

Check keyword density and other factors that matter for optimization of image alt texts:

Important Keywords									Up
Keyword	Words Total *		Keyword Density *		Using Keyword *		Optimization Rate *

Here are some tips for writing good image alt texts:

- Keep them brief: your alt texts should fit the sizes of images.
- Make them descriptive: give users an idea of what they would see on an image.
- Add a teaser: if this is a header, a logo or a section title etc., a brief teaser description will keep the user interested to read further.
- Avoid ambiguity: though alt texts are short, their meaning must be complete and exclude misinterpretation.
- Use keywords: this is a reminder: search engines will like to see keywords in your alt texts.

As a final step of onpage optimization, including smartly-composed alt texts into your page's HTML code will allow you to use the full potential of your page <http://webpromoters.us> for achieving top Google placement and boosting your profits.

But this is not the last word to say about optimizing your site. If you are ready with alt texts, go on to see final words. Don't miss some more good advice for optimization of your pages!

Final Words

To escalate your website's sales, the only 100% working way is steady and smart search engine optimization. It allows you to get thousands of new customers that are searching exactly for what you offer.

This report gives you the necessary and easy-to-implement optimization advice. Follow the report's guidelines, and it will be possible for you to reach any desired spot in Google and be sure to get a massive flow of targeted traffic to your website.

In addition to the report's onpage optimization advice, here are general recommendations that will help you facilitate your page's success in Google or any other search engine:

Check Your Page Several Times

Even if you are sure that you have made the right changes, run a check and generate a report once again. It may tell you that you still need to modify your webpage slightly, so take some minutes to change it and check your page once again. This way you make sure that your site is well-optimized indeed.

Select Winning Keywords For Your Optimization Campaign

To achieve the highest possible ranking, get the expected flow of visitors and convert it into cash, you must select the best keywords for competing in your niche. Today's SEO techniques allow to anticipate which keywords will be bringing the best possible traffic, while being the easiest to compete for.

A tool that may help you find the most profitable keywords is Rank Tracker. It lets you use 8 best working research methods to select keywords that will bring you a guaranteed increase in sales.

Control Your Rankings To Get Solid Results

Search engine rankings go up and down each day. If you seriously intend to rank high, you must check where you rank daily, and adjust your strategy for an unshakable top position.

The same software, Rank Tracker, will be a biggest help here. Download it, try it and see how much control over your rankings is possible with one easy-to-use SEO tool.

Learn Efficient Link-Building

The possibilities to boost your rankings with link-building are unlimited. However, building links quickly and efficiently is not always the same. To search for high-quality link partners and manage the whole link-building campaign, try LinkAssistant. You will get the full worth of each link-building task, and spend only as little time as is really needed.

Use Only The Best-Working Means To Beat Your Competition

The only way to know for sure which SEO techniques will work for your particular site, even before trying, is detailed competition research. Find out the most profitable link sources of your competitors and put them to your own advantage. To spy on your competition quickly and legally, you can use SEO SpyGlass.

Do Optimization On A Regular Basis

You can get your guaranteed top position fast and hold it firmly if you do optimization regularly and use reliable techniques. You can discuss your SEO efforts with other webmasters, SEOs and site owners on these SEO forums: <http://www.link-assistant.com/seo-talk/>

Now you have the necessary knowledge and tools to start optimizing your own website like an SEO professional. Go ahead to do what this report suggests, and see how your site will pay you.
